Molly Kellogg, RD, LCSW

This is who I am...

I am passionate about helping you make a difference in your clients' lives. Having been as stuck and frustrated as you when clients don't follow advice, I'm excited to pass on what I know.

After five years as a clinical dietitian I started a private practice in 1985. The results were discouraging. I needed more skills so I returned to school for a graduate social work degree in 1994 and completed the training to join the Motivational Interviewing Network of Trainers in 2010. My practice now includes both psychotherapy and nutrition care for those with eating disorders and disordered eating.

As I gained new insights I began writing monthly "Counseling Tips for Nutrition Therapists." The Tips have developed into Practice Workbooks, supervision groups for dietitians around the country and training programs such as this.

I've worked hard to build skill in guiding people to make vital health behavior changes. Now I want to share them with you. Are you ready?
